RABLOS ART STUDIO

Creating Art is my passion.

Through my work I want to invite and welcome the viewers to a place where they can wonder and immerse themselves into a world of fantasy and magic, where they can forget about the real world we live in for a while.

When I make my art work I forget about everything, it is like a meditation to me, a way to escape and breath, and come back relaxed and in peace. My inspiration comes from nature, from emotions I felt visiting the landscapes and seeing the colors and shapes of the places I lived in. Many of my pieces are inspired by Irish landscapes, Ireland welcomed me when I needed it most.

To bring my paintings to life, it is important for me that they have relief, as this gives them movement and personality. To make this happen I use recycled materials, like coffee capsules, it is a way to help the environment as well as to emphasize my belief that nothing ends in life, but transforms into something more beautiful, That everything has a new beginning.

The best way to enjoy my paintings is in person as the photographs don't do them justice. Emotions are always better passed on when you see my artwork life.

BIO

My first introduction to art was working with clay when i was 8 years old, my art teacher was a brilliant sculptress from the North of Spain. She was one of my biggest influences. She always thought I was talented and encourage me to attend art school.

At 17 I started art school in Madrid which helped me to develop my skills. My mixed media art teacher believed I was very talented and encouraged me to follow my career in painting.

After I finished Art school I lived in different places. These locations inspired me to master my skills and find my personal style by continuing to paint and make sculptures. I lived in Scotland for 3 years, where I was successfully selling my pieces to shops. Then in Alicante, in Spain, where I worked with a ceramist for 4 years.

In 2012 I finally took the decision to move to Dublin, Ireland, where I met my husband, became a mother and started a life there.

Since then, I have been developing my passion for art by working with recycled materials and mastering my skills with different art techniques: Collage with recycled coffee capsules, shells, acrylics and resin.
